

Operation Ishtar's Wrath II: "Alien Zombie Queen"

*"I will knock down the Gates of the Netherworld,
I will smash the door posts, and leave the doors flat down, and will let the dead go up to eat the living!
And the dead will outnumber the living!"*

-Epic of Gilgamesh. Tablet VI

In 2008 forces were sent into the Central New Mexico region to deal with failed Alien/Human technology advances. These forces were never heard from again. A few months ago, two warring organizations (The Sub Rosa Organization and the Global Council on Piracy) unknowingly opened a passageway into a sealed underground laboratory. Upon entering the laboratory, SRO forces were infected by a carrier of the Project Last Will and Testament Serum. This carrier seems to have evolved since the operations last year. Early reports from the field indicate that she is an intelligent "queen" with extreme resistance to conventional weapons. Humans infected by the Queen do not possess her abilities. We want you to enter the area, deal with the threat and extract the queen for our research.

Please read the attached operational details from last year to understand what you will be dealing with.

Good luck.

“Every calculation based on experience elsewhere fails in New Mexico.” -Lew Wallace

On July 16, 1945 the worlds first nuclear device was detonated at White Sands Missile range. This event changed warfare forever, as well as influenced otherworldly happenings. On July 8, 1947 a crashed unidentified flying object was retrieved by US military forces. The craft was later reported to be a weather balloon. That story is of course slightly incorrect. These are the the correct details:

The Nuclear test at the trinity site was detected by the Xanricans, a slightly more advanced humanoid species than us humans. They had been looking for a location to preform dangerous research on advances of their own biological systems. Under normal circumstances, they would of used any old empty planet, but in this case they needed intelligent non automated help on their projects. A craft with their scientists and diplomats was sent to our planet. The trip took roughly two years. The Xanrican delegation had decided to land near the Trinity site, but their systems failed, and instead they crashed in the southern portion of New Mexico, specifically Roswell. Conspiracy theorists talk about found alien bodies and autopsies, which makes for a bad science fiction story. In reality, all beings aboard were alive. They, exited the vessel and made their way north to the nearest military base. In the months that followed, the Xanricans signed a secret treaty with the United States government. Humans would work on experiments underground bases that the Xanricans would supervise over from a distance. In return the human race would receive advanced technology. As a result of this technology, Earth now has advanced computers that we use in everyday life today. Technology is released slowly to make it seem that we humans are making these advances ourselves.

A tunnel system hundreds of feet below the New Mexican landscape connects underground bases located in Dulce, Albuquerque, Los Alamos, White sands, and others. In addition, there are access tunnels connecting to Tijeras and Red Bluff Lake as well as the Gila Wilderness area. These access tunnels allow for emergency evacuation as well as a way to transport supplies to the bases.

The work that was and is being performed deals in biological advances for the Xanricans. As well as weapon development. One biological experiment, code name: Last Will and Testament, involved allowing a Xanrican or human soldier to transfer knowledge of a military nature after flat lining. Initial tests resulted in success. After a soldier is killed, initially inert bio engineered cells will sense the lack of oxygen being transferred into body. Once the oxygen stays beneath life sustaining levels for a a specific amount of time, the cells will activate and begin to take over the body. Eventually the cells would sustain the soldier's brain and allow him or her to communicate his or her final thoughts telepathically.

Unfortunately something went wrong. The cells mutated, and the inert cells did not wait for death, nor did the mutated infection sustain just the brain. Instead with cells activated upon contact with oxygen rich blood, and the entire infected body became a tool for the infection. Scientists were initially infected, then project security forces succumbed.

The mode of infection is through direct body contact. For unknown reasons, the fingertips of the infected body most easily transfer the infection. Within two minutes the cells will override the brain, killing most the consciousness of the host body. The cells activate parts of the brain which allow for telepathic communication. Once activated, each infected body can now communicate with each other, allowing for a primitive yet effective group consciousness. A new neural center is developed deep to the gluteus minimus, and Piriformis muscles. Recent experience has shown that firing a gun at this neural center will kill the infected body. Shots to the head will have no effect.

Due to yet unknown reasons, security failed to stop the infection from spreading. A group of infected bodies made their way through an access tunnel leading to Tijeras New Mexico. Humans are now being infected in this town. This infection needs to be stopped now or the entire United States may be at risk to infection. The Xanricans wish to destroy the entire state of New Mexico to keep the infection from spreading. High level government and military personal would rather not take this course of action since a cover up would be impossible.

Instead a highly trained all volunteer force was deployed to the area to prevent the infection from spreading. All but three members of this team were compromised. In their last radio contact they told us they are all down under 100 rounds. They are attempting to evacuate along with a few surviving towns people.

The Only way to kill an infected body is to shoot it in the neural centers, in this case being the buttock region. Head shots will only reduce the telepathic abilities of the infection. If an infected body touches you with its hands, you will be infected. Ammo has been dropped via air transport, don't stay near the ammo location for long, or you will draw the attention of infected bodies.

With the exception of the surviving special forces team, no full auto weapons are allowed. Specifically hand guns are the only weapons for civilians. Additional mags for weapons are not allowed, but players may carry as many guns as they wish. Reloading may only be done at ammo dumps.

If a human dies, he or she does not respawn, instead he or she become a zombie. Zombies do respawn.

Infected bodies must move like stereotypical zombies.
